On March 16, 2003 Rachel Corrie, a 23-year-old peace activist from Olympia, Washington, was crushed to death by an Israeli Defence Forces Caterpillar bulldozer. It ran over her as she was kneeling and waving her arms in an effort to prevent it from destroying the home of pharmacist Samir Nasrallah in Rafah in the Gaza Strip.

Rachel is pictured at left a few days before her death. She is standing with a bullhorn attempting to defend another Palestinian home from destruction by the Israeli military.
